AMY SHEKHTER

Amy Shekhter is an American contemporary pop artist. She is inspired by historic iconic figures and her love of today's fashion. She uses a creative mix of mediums, merging digital design with various layers of texture found in resin, glitter, paint, and crystals. By putting a modern spin on familiar imagery, Amy's pop art not only introduces younger generations to these important icons but also touches on the materialism and values of today's culture.

Amy spent her childhood living in Alaska. She then moved to Florida in 2002 to pursue a degree in education. She used her Master of Education in Art Education to teach art in public and private schools, as well as at many local museums and galleries. Over the past five years, her love for teaching has evolved into a desire to focus more on her work. Her admiration for influential females is evident in her past and current works, where she creates a playful twist on contemporary culture using prominent branding and bold colors. Guided by her fascination with the differences in communities, values, and needs she has observed in her cross-country move, she expresses this cultural contrast through her work.
